Red Cross Chapter Gives Report of Work

What This Buffalo Physician Has Done For Humanity

The picture which appears here of Dr. Pierce of Buffalo, N. Y., was taken in 1910. As a young man Dr. Pierce practiced medicine in Pennsylvania and was known far and wide for his great success in alleviating disease. He early moved to Buffalo and put up in ready-to-use form, his Golden Medical Discovery, the well-known tonic for the blood. This strength-builder is made from a formula which Dr. Pierce found most effective in diseases of the blood. It contains no alcohol and is an extract of native roots with the ingredients plainly stated on the wrapper. Good red blood, vim, vigor and vitality are sure to follow if you take this Alternative Extract. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery clears away pimples and annoying eruptions and tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. This Discovery corrects the disordered conditions in a sick stomach aids digestion, acts as a tonic and purifies the blood. Write Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. and receive confidential medical advice without charge. All druggists sell Discovery, tablets or liquid. Send 10c for trial pkg.

REAL ESTATE ASSESSED EACH YEAR IN STATE

Instructions Are Issued to Assessors For Their Work This Spring

Real estate must be assessed each year, according to instructions issued to tax assessors by Tax Commissioner C. C. Converse. "There seems to be no way of exactly giving effect to both the wording and intent of the law which requires annual assessment and the biennial 'entitlement' of real estate," the instructions forwarded to the assessors state. Holding that there must be new listing and assessment each year the Tax Commissioner says that "it does not follow that the valuations of real estate must be changed each year; but they should be changed each year in each township or other taxing district in which changes are necessary in order to make the assessment correspond with the true values." The true and full value is the usual selling price at private, not forced sale, the assessors are instructed. Some reports have been received by the Tax Commissioner that assessors have made a flat assessment for all lands in one township. Assessors are instructed that each parcel of land shall be considered separately. The value of mineral deposits should be included in the valuation placed on the land, it is stated. Assessors are told to consider the great depreciation in the value of livestock in the last three years in making the assessments. Women are to be assessed for the school poll tax, but not for the road poll.

YIELD OF CORN CAN BE IMPROVED SAYS WALDRON

Fargo, N. D., April 6.—Every farmer can become his own plant breeder as far as corn is concerned, says L. R. Waldron, expert in that line at the Agricultural College here. The yield of corn can be improved as much as 14 per cent by using seed which is a cross between two widely different kinds of corn—such as Cluster White Dent and Mandan King, he says. The process is simple. The two kinds of corn to be crossed are planted in alternate rows, apart from any other corn. When the plants begin to tassels the tassels are cut off of all the stalks of one variety—the White Dent, for example. Thus the silk of the dent corn will be pollinated only by the pollen of the Mandan King—if that is the other kind of corn planted. The ears growing on the dent corn stalks will be a cross between the dent and the Mandan varieties and it is these that should be used for seed. The greater difference between the kinds crossed, the better the results, according to Mr. Waldron. The 14 per cent increase was obtained with the cross mentioned above but another cross which gave good results was that of the same dent corn with Mercer Flint. Mr. Waldron suggests that if the work of cross breeding is too complicated for each farmer to do, it might pay certain farmers to make a practice of raising such cross seed to sell. Incidentally, the Indians knew of the advantage of cross breeding corn, according to Mr. Waldron.

F. E. DIEHL TALKS FLOOD PROTECTION

Flood protection should begin in the Little Missouri and the Heart and the Knife and the Cannonball, declared F. E. Diehl, manager of the North Dakota Home Building association before an organization of engineers considering reclamation by irrigation. "It is time the government understood," said Mr. Diehl, "that the proper way for the protection of the lower Mississippi is in impounding the flood waters of the spring and conserving it for the use of agriculture during the dry months of the summer. There are many places on the four streams mentioned where large reservoirs or lakes could be constructed at little cost." Mr. Diehl has spent twenty years of his life in the Slope country and is familiar with streams of which he was speaking as well as the general topography of the lands west and south of the Missouri river.

LOOKING FOR BUILDING BOOM IN NORTH DAKOTA

Fargo, April 6.—The flowers that bloom in the spring trade, are not going to be the only things that blossom forth in North Dakota this year when sunshine finally prevails over blizzards. The slumbering business of building houses and schools is due for possibly the biggest revival since the war according to V. H. Leeb, secretary of the state association of builders' exchanges. Among some of the larger projects already contracted for or contemplated are: new Elks club and large two story warehouse for a wholesale company, Fargo, new building for the State Agricultural College, Fargo; Normal school building, Minot; a large main building for the normal school, Dickinson; law school building for the state university, Grand Forks. Much figuring on contracts has been going on throughout the state, says Mr. Leeb, and so far no contracts have been rejected. There are several reasons why construction should boom this year, according to men in touch with the situation.

1. There hasn't been much building for a number of years and schools and homes are very badly needed throughout the state. In the cities people have been living to a large extent under crowded conditions in small apartments and crowded flats. In the country many farmers have simply been making the old home do for another year—and then another. 2. Building material prices are well down and stationary now, building men say. (They add that there will be no further material decrease until freight rates, which they class as "exorbitant" go down.) The cost of labor is low. Accordingly contracts will be made at a low figure. Regarding the school situation, Mr. Leeb says that 200 districts would begin building at once if they had the money. In many cases, money is not available, however.

WINS HONORS AT UNIVERSITY

Millard G. Anderson, who has played baseball in Bismarck as catcher for the local team, has won honors at Valparaiso university, according to the following dispatch in the Minneapolis Tribune: "Millard G. Anderson, of 1912 south Third street, captain and star center of the Valparaiso university basketball team, was awarded his letter at a banquet for the team on the Valpo campus and was, at the same time, hailed as one of the most brilliant players and sterling leaders in the history of the school, according to word received today. "Anderson's team won a majority of its games and lost only one contest on the home floor."

Kota Wheat Crop In N. D. May Reach 100,000 Bushels

Fargo, N. D., April 6.—With the aid of good weather, North Dakota should have a supply of from 80,000 to 100,000 bushels of Kota wheat by this fall. Farmers of the state are planting 5,000 bushels of the grain this year and the yield indicated may be expected with fairly good weather, according to experts in this line. Kota is the wheat which was brought from Russia by Professor H. L. Bolley of the Agricultural college, and was developed by L. R. Waldron and J. Allen Clark at the Dickinson station and at the experiment farm here. Agricultural men say it is as rust resistant as D 1 and therefore a good producer, and as good a milling wheat as Marquis. Marquis is susceptible to rust while the durum does not bring high prices at the mills. The only possible fault to be found with this strain are, according to Mr. Waldron, that it may not be able to withstand drought as well as some other strains and that its straw is not very strong. Last year, which was extremely hot and dry, Kota only produced about as much wheat per acre as Marquis, he says, while in preceding years it produced better crops than Marquis. Most of the Kotas will be raised on farms in the eastern part of the state this year. Some of the farmers are planting it for their own use while much is being planted on contract with W. R. Porter and Jalmer Herre, who own in the neighborhood of 75 per cent of this wheat in the state according to agricultural college men. A co-operative North Dakota Kota growers association has been formed along lines similar to the Grimm alfalfa association of the state, with the object of setting a standard of pure Kota seed and marketing it. Kotas was for a time the neglected step-child among the wheats brought back from Russia by Professor Bolley. It came to light in 1916 when Messrs. Waldron and Clark were experimenting with D 1 at the Dickinson station. Like D 1 it is a bearded wheat, but the head and berries were found to be different from those of the D 1. The experimenters found it to be resistant and had a milling test made and it was reported to be very satisfactory in that respect. Then they set to work to develop it in earnest.

NEW SELECTION OF SMALL JURY

Waukegan, Ill., April 6.—(By the Associated Press.)—Governor Small today withdrew his challenge to the jury panel to sit in his trial and then accepted a proposal by Judge Edwards that a committee of three select a new jury list. The case was then continued until Monday, April 17, 10 A. M.

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health

Baltimore, Maryland.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WADSWORTH, 3018 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well. Just plain statements, but they want other women to be helped.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

BRINGS ACTION ON STATE-BUILT HOUSE IN FARGO

Complainant Demands That It Be Given Him at Price He Says was Agreed Upon

Fargo, N. D., April 7.—Action to compel the North Dakota Homebuilders association to deliver to him a deed to the residence, at 1425 9th St. S., Fargo, at the price that he says was agreed upon when the association undertook to build the residence, has been instituted today by David Hull. Mr. Hull, in his complaint, sets up the proposition that he paid $1,000 to the association, and that it was agreed that he was to pay $28.65 a month for 30 years to take care of the balance of $5,000, or the purchase price, he says was agreed upon. The association failed to lived up to its agreement, complains Hull, and later asked that he pay $7,376.78 for the residence, refusing to go through with the original deal. Mr. Hull insists that the association is bound under its agreement to give up to him the residence at the agreed price. This action will have a material effect as far as the manner of settling the Home Builders association affairs is concerned. Many other purchasers of homes from the association have been guaranteed the delivery of residences to them at a cost far less than the association now demands. The increased purchase price asked by the association grows out of the manner in which the affairs of the organization were conducted by the old state officials. Pierce, Tenneson & Cupter, represent Mr. Hull.

SEEK FUND FOR CAHILL CASE

Board of Administration Employees Asked to Contribute

Employees of the board of administration are urged to contribute to the "Cahill defense fund" being raised by E. E. Rimbach, purchasing agent for the board. In a letter to employees Rimbach takes a slap at George Totten Jr. for "resigning under fire" and stating that it gives opponents a distinct advantage. He points to the "Stange-land affair" as another case where failure to stand ground helped the opposition. Employees are invited to contribute "a month's or two months' salary" to employ lawyers to enable Cahill to retain his place on the board, and Rimbach gives his assurance that he is quite willing to do the same as he expected to lose his job anyway if Cahill was off the board. Rimbach today admitted the fund was being raised, and declared that plenty of funds were available but declined to say how much had been raised.

TRIO TAKE AN 8-MILE WALK

Coroner Stroelke Leads Two Others in Unwelcome Hike

Coroner H. J. Stroelke, F. J. Grady and H. H. Ferner are recounting experiences of an eight-mile walk taken Wednesday night between McKenzie and Menoken against their will and quite contrary to their expectations. Coroner Stroelke was called to the home of M. Nielsen, near McKenzie, to investigate the sudden death of Mrs. Margaret Nielsen, an invalid. Returning to McKenzie the party telephoned to Bismarck for a car to meet them. Because the road is covered with water for a distance outside of McKenzie they said they would walk down the railroad track for a couple of miles. They did so, but when they got there no car was in sight. They waited in vain. The trio then continued their walk to Menoken, telephoned to Jamestown for an order stopping No. 3 and arrived in Bismarck at midnight. They learned that the car which started out to meet them got stuck in the mud, and it cost the driver $10 to get pulled out. The death of Mrs. Nielsen was declared due to heart disease. She had been an invalid for many years, and had been living in squalor, the coroner said.

FARGO BARBERS BUSY BOBBING KIDDIES HAIR

Fargo, N. D., April 7.—The youngsters of Fargo are crowding the barbers out of the barber shops during the first warm days of spring. A survey of these cranial landscape gardens shows a four year old in about every other chair, gravely eyeing an altering reflection in the mirror as the scissors snip away fair locks and dark—mostly fair. The barbers have to talk rope skipping, jacks and marbles to their customers if they wish to discuss sports. And they are not able to say, "Tonic, Sir?" at the end of the session. Mother is usually along to see that the thing is done right. The girls and the boys under four are getting their hair bobbed in square Dutch fashion. The more mature young gentlemen who range from four to six years, usually insist on an honest to goodness haircut such as other men wear, however. A few youngsters object to facing the unknown terrors of the barber chair but mostly they show only a wide-eyed interest.

RED TAPE IS PUT ASIDE

Seed Loans Being Speeded Up From Grand Forks Office

Grand Forks, N. D., April 7.—Red tape has been thrown into the wastebasket at the federal seed loan office here in charge of C. W. Warburton. The office is speeding up the job of placing hundreds of drought-stricken farmers in a position to plant a new crop this year. Numerous essential details must be carefully handled if the loans are to reach the applicants who are in the greatest need. For this reason every effort is being made to single out those who have been the heaviest drought sufferers for special consideration. The legal requirements for making a seed loan are now comparatively simple. A crop mortgage in North Dakota and seed lien in Montana are required by the government as security for the money advanced. The applicant must furnish a note for the amount advanced, bearing interest at 5 per cent. The main difference between the transaction with the government and that with an ordinary bank is that the farmer with no credit with a bank is the one most favored by the government. Preference is also given to married applicants over bachelors. The method which has been adopted of handling applications through county agents has helped materially in speeding up the work, and checks are going out every day in increasing numbers.

BOND PAYMENTS ARE RETURNED

Grand Forks Subscriptions Are Returned to Donors

Grand Forks, N. D., April 7.—Checks for more than $60,000 representing payments on subscriptions for North Dakota mill and elevator bonds were mailed to the original owners Wednesday night by J. H. McNicol, treasurer of the Grand Forks Commercial club committee which was in charge of the bond sale here a year ago. Under an agreement with the former state industrial commission the Grand Forks Commercial club at the time the mill and elevator was located here agreed to sell mill and elevator bonds up to $1,000,000. The first installment of this was to be $300,000 and the money which is now being sent out represents the initial payments on these bonds obtained by the Commercial club committee. Since the industrial commission has arranged for the sale of all the mill and elevator bonds in a block the local sale is no longer desired and all subscriptions are therefore being repaid in full with six per cent interest. The money to make the repayment was received early this week from the industrial commission, and since then Mr. McNicol has been busy writing out checks.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

By Olive Barton Roberts

Nancy and Nick, on the Five-and-Ten-Cent Store Mountain, stood gazing into the store window, where the fish-hooks were, each of them fingering the dime they had found in their pockets. It had been a surprise to discover the money, for neither of them had a penny when they started.

"Oh, look!" cried Nick, "there's the very kind of hooks I've been wanting to catch shiners with." Then suddenly his eyes caught a glimpse of something else. "And there's one of those new tops that plays a tune. I'd like to see how it works! And look over there—there's a balloon you can blow up as big as a tin pall! Come on inside, Nancy, I want to look around."

Nancy did not have to be urged, you may be sure, for had not her quick eyes seen things, too—a remarkable china doll with joints, and a hat that wouldn't come off, a box of paints, and a whole washing set with real clothes pins?

In they went, and joy of joys! There was everything in that wonderful store that heart (of a little boy or girl) could wish.

Marbles, kites and thingumbobs, Drums and horns and canes with knobs, Jumping-jacks that worked on strings, Dolls and carts—all sorts of things.

They went from counter to counter, entranced at all the things they saw. Never once did they think of their errand.

CHARGE POLICEMAN BY DAY WAS BURGLAR BY NIGHT

By NEA Service
Seattle, April 7. On duty—a policeman.

Off duty—a burglar.
That was the schedule Fred L. Trombley, Seattle policeman, operated on, if charges preferred against him by the Seattle police department are proved.

Shorn of his uniform, the alleged Jekyll-Hyde policeman is awaiting trial in jail here.

His former police comrades charge: THAT photographs and records prove Trombley was sentenced to the state penitentiary for grand larceny in 1909 and that he escaped.

THAT he served a jail sentence for petit larceny.

THAT he was sentenced to the state penitentiary for a $3000 jewelry robbery.

In December, 1920, Trombley passed civil service examinations and became a temporary officer. Later he was admitted as a permanent member of the force.

Police charge he served at the same jail where he had formerly been held. Meanwhile, Trombley devoted his time off duty to burglary, police say. He carried a police service revolver for police use and another weapon for his private use, according to the charges.

After an accident had brought to light Trombley's alleged criminal activities, he was seized when reporting at his station for police duty.

Toes did a sailor's hornpipe on one foot and a Spanish fandango on the other. Then he kissed himself heartily. "I knew it, I knew it!" he cried. "Once get a child inside of a five-and-ten-cent-store with a dime in his pocket and you'll never get him out. It will take twice as long to get two children out. And as there are about a hundred stores those Twins will spend about a year on that mountain, the way I count."

"Sure as you're living, I'll marry Princess Therna, yet."

Oakland Cars Guanteed Against "Oil Pumping"

Every dollar saved through lower material cost and greater efficiency in production has been placed right back into the Oakland car, according to C. J. Nephler, general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company.

"It is a well-known saying," declares Mr. Nephler, "that it is often easier to cut prices than to make a better job. We have centered our efforts on making a better job. It was a question when designing the new Oakland 6-44 models whether to use the advantage of lower material and production costs to bring down the selling price or to put back the savings into the car to the end of making it the finest type of six cylinder car at its price. We chose the latter course."

"As one example of improvement the cylinders, pistons and piston rings have been so constructed that we give a 15,000 mile guarantee against what is commonly known as 'oil pumping,' one of the few performance guarantees ever given by any automobile company."

"Assurance of quiet motor operation is given in the use of the Morse adjustable silent chain drive, which drives the camshaft and generator and insures absolute silence. An easy adjustment gives assurance of keeping the tension right at all times."

"A new type of bronze-back main camshaft bearings is being used. These are interchangeable. The bearings are so accurately made that they fit to the thousandth part of an inch, thus assuring long life and quiet operation. The force feed lubrication is an individual feature that makes for long-bearing life. This can be adjusted to feed oil in adequate quantity when the car is new or sustained speed is desired."

"Refined graceful body lines, glass-covered silver faced instruments on a walnut dash, nickel trimmings and drum-type nickel adjustable headlights are some of the other new features. And last, the body is so insulated that metal never touches metal, and rattling and squeaking has been thereby eliminated."

A Complete Cycle of Service

IN directing the affairs of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) the 7 men responsible for its management and success keep constantly before them the ideals of service which have animated the organization in its development.

They are ever mindful of the fact that the service rendered by this Company bears a close and intimate relation to the progress, success and prosperity of practically every other industry. And that it has a major bearing on many professional and highly specialized branches of business.

They recognize the grave responsibility of supplying petroleum products to those who use the internal combustion engine as a source of power, and to those who depend upon this Company to lubricate their equipment in such manner as to conserve the power and the machinery which it operates.

These are the major and more obvious services rendered, but equal attention is given to problems affecting an individual or a small group.

This service may take the form of expert advice as to the best method of lubricating a single machine, it may be something to reduce the labor of the housewife, or to assist the medical profession in serving humanity. It may be a new kind of pavement or a method to increase or conserve the food supply.

These are but a few of the hundreds of ways in which Standard Oil service, positive and clearly defined, is helping and adding to the efficiency and economy of business generally.

As an example of how far this service is carried, we may mention the recently developed burning oil, Neolite, which supplies a growing demand for an oil used primarily in incubators and brooders, where a steady, unvarying heat must be maintained over a considerable period of time. To those who use incubators and brooders, Neolite is of great value.

While it is probable that the sales of this product will never attain a large volume, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) adds it to its long list of useful products that it may further discharge its obligation in rendering a complete cycle of service to 25 million people of 11 Middle Western States.

POCKETS, BUT NOT FOR USE

Now, that she's got 'em, what does she do with 'em? Nothing! Time was when a set of pockets on a woman's frock proclaimed it a house dress, the logical idea evidently being that when a woman was engaged in household tasks she needed some place to put odds and ends. But nowadays all kinds of informal frocks are equipped with pockets. The pity of it is that so few of these pockets are ever put to any practical use. To a woman's vanity and a haunting fear that she will stretch them and make them baggy and shapely that prevents her from using them? Or has her pocket sense become atrophied through centuries of disuse—centuries when men had all the pockets and women enjoyed only silly reticules?

Except when a woman wishes to strike a defiant pose she rarely puts even the tips of her fingers into her dress pockets, and all the other things which she might so conveniently carry in them she carries somewhere else.

Sketched today are two jersey frocks each with pockets, and each an exponent of simple smartness. The one piece jersey frock, though not an original creation of this season, is as popular as the day it was first introduced. The fact that jersey comes in many lovely shades of all the popular colors makes it a desirable fabric for informal wear. One of the most striking jersey frocks seen in a New York shop recently was of beige jersey combined with a soft shade of deft blue. Beige and brown combinations are also very stunning, providing that just the right brown is chosen. Beige is one of the season's best colors and brown, in any shade, promises to supplant black in popular favor.

SIDE LIGHTS ON THE BOOK DRIVE

Many Interesting Features Of Book Drive Are Told

Miss Mary E. Downey, state librarian, was wonderfully impressed with the fine spirit of the teachers throughout the schools, showing the right pep and enthusiasm, the work of the city nurse, the drinking of milk by the underweight children and the attractiveness of the buildings and good janitor service. She said that life in Bismarck should be made as pleasant as possible for teachers putting such energy and interest into their work.

Miss Downey spoke in all the schools encouraging the children and praising them for their effort in the recent drive. She also talked to them about forming the habit of reading, suiting what she said to the grade and age of the children. She asked questions which brought some interesting answers. "Why do you come to school?" "To learn to read." "To get an education." "To learn to read and write and do numbers." "To learn enough to go into business when we grow up." "To learn so you can have a trade." "To learn to read, write and figure so you can be a banker." One manly little fellow capped the climax when he stood up and said, "I come to school to learn things so as to grow up and amount to something in the world."

Some very unusual things occurred which would take place only in a capital city. Someone thought of unearthing the old legislative bills. At first it seemed that only a few would come in which might be counted but when they began to appear by the truck load along with the statements of the Bank of North Dakota they all had to be cut out of the count. This seemed to make them think of other things of an advertising nature. One child tried to flood the drive with three or four thousand life insurance pamphlets and another with pamphlets from a jewelry store.

The one thing they did not seem to think of was the sale catalogues which large houses send by the car load for distribution through the postoffice. The usual number of old ones came from the homes but had they gotten the idea every child in town, no doubt, would have asked for them at the postoffice.

A good illustration of what will happen when boys are turned to some interesting constructive cause was shown by two boys who had a difficulty and were busy all week preparing weapons for a fight to settle the matter on Saturday. One of the teachers on passing them Saturday morning was delighted to see them working together collecting books and magazines evidently having entirely forgotten their feud.

One little girl brought as her contribution early in the drive, the family Bible, the dictionary and a Sears Roebuck catalogue. In one family a boy hustled everything there was to be given which greatly disturbed his little sister. Her father handed her a dollar and told her to see if that would not be accepted. The best child's book that can be had for the money will be purchased for the children's room in the Public Library.

The winning boy had a sleigh out all week and on the night before the contest ended accompanied by two teachers and two boys he drove 7 miles into the country and gathered the books and magazines stored in an attic and a granary.

Supt. J. M. Martin visited all the schools yesterday and gave the prizes in new paper dollar bills. A prize was given in each of the public schools.

The collection is about the average one and shows what the people of the

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

DO YOU REMEMBER ?

If you were fortunate enough to be raised on a farm or in a small town 20 or more years ago, it often occurs to you how much the modern city boy misses in the way of real fun.

Along about this time of year, back there in the radiant past, "the gang" was following the Huckleberry Finn, the courageous individual first to brave the springtime of the "ole swimmin' hole."

It is a sorry contrast, alongside the concrete swimming pools for metropolitan youth in this year 1922.

Nature was coming to life, back there in the country, with an entrancing display of buds, first wild flowers, pussy-willows and strange birds going north. And, eh, that fresh air!

About all the modern city gets in the way of wild flowers is dandelions for pa's home-brew. And what he sees going north is more apt to be a motorcycle or police patrol than birds.

Back yonder, we had big barns with huge haystacks to play in. And, at this season, it was customary to erect great shanties in backyard and vacant lots, to house the gang's secret society.

In the 1922 city, the barn is a one-story garage, and pa usually has a fit if he catches the boys in the flivver-hotel, playing with the oil cans.

Cities are heartsickeningly clean, with no lumber and old tin cans and packing boxes and back-alley bones and junk for the boys to gather.

Remember when we put on a Buffalo Bill show at the edge of town, and a burnt-cork minstrels in the barn? Do you think the modern city youth has as much fun at his dancing class or the school cantata? Neither do we.

The city lad is so pressed for elbow-room and playthings that, for instance, when he gets roller skates he rides 'em to death, then hungrily seeks a new amusement.

That's why we have waves of juvenile, maniacal concentration on one thing in the cities. Right now, it's wireless.

Civilization and metropolitan congestion may be a good thing for grown-ups, though odds are on the nays. But it's certainly tough on the youngsters.

It is childhood that has lost most in modern city life. And even when pa takes the kids to the country on Sunday afternoon, they get about as much of a glimpse of it as from a moving train. Pa is restless, nerves keyed up, wants to get along fast and try another stretch of pavement.

Real-for-sure boyhood is vanishing to join other antiques of the day when nature and science were mysterious enough to make life worth while.

PONZI

When Charles Ponzi was given a five-year sentence in federal court for his get-rich-quick manipulations many commented, "He probably has a bunch of kale salted away and will come out and enjoy it after serving his term."

Thieves who are nursing any similar notion as they concoct swindles should ponder the bad news handed to Ponzi by the Supreme Court in Washington.

The court rules that Ponzi is to be tried in Massachusetts courts on 22 indictments charging him with certain crime under laws of that state.

Ponzi is not apt to appear in vaudeville or the movies for a good many years.

UNIQUE LEGACY

The will of Oliver M. Wentworth, of Boston, leaves large sums to various schools, provided their students are not allowed to play football.

Most schools would rather have the football than the money. Colleges, in particular, realize that healthy bodies are just as necessary as trained minds in the battles of life.

Many professors, who formerly opposed sports, have been won over by realization that an outfit like a good football team is the best advertisement a college can have.

The average student would rather be in the vicinity of Tad Jones than Professor Einstein.

PARCHESI

You'd get a laugh if you told baseball or football players that parchesi is a great sport. Yet parchesi was to Persia, at the height of the civilization, what baseball is to America.

Persians played the game with a giant parchesi board worked in tiles in the floors of palaces. They shook dice, moving, winning and losing beautiful slave girls instead of button-shaped counters. That was the ancient form of sport—and jazz.

THERE MUST BE A GOAL

To make work interesting, one must have a definite goal constantly in mind.

A hired housekeeper finds her work dull most of the time. Yet the same work in the same surroundings will thrill her and keep her happy if it's her own home and she has the happiness of her family to work for.

The drifter and all others who have no definite object in life are bound to be restless, discontented. Select your goal. Fight toward it steadily. That is the key to real happiness, provided progress is noticeable.

"Nothing to work for" means "nothing to live for."

ORIGINAL MELTING POT

India has 319,075,132 inhabitants, according to the census registration in March.

This gives her about three times as many people as our country, packed into three-fifths as much territory.

India was the original melting pot of nations. Now, after a glorious ancient civilization and prosperity, she decays—land of famine, poverty, disease, ignorance, superstition, caste system, midnight despair.

Will America a few thousands years from now, be in the same condition? That depends on how we conserve our natural resources, health, intellectual freedom and ideals.

All fruit ripens into decay.

RECREATION

The city that does not provide proper playgrounds for its children is developing a generation of physical weaklings and dull mentalities.

Fortunately, Americans seem awakening to this truth, though slowly.

Nearly $9,000,000 was spent on children's playgrounds and recreation centers in 458 cities last year. This will pay better dividends than could be realized by spending the $9,000,000 in any other way.

Quickest way to destroy a civilization is to neglect the children.

CHAMPION

L. M. McNeil, working in railroad shops at Altoona, Pa., thinks he and two helpers have broken the world's record by driving 1544 rivets a day for a month.

From this learn that the hardest work can be made interesting, even thrilling, by taking the viewpoint that it is a game, a sport.

Viewpoint is everything, in making life dull or interesting.

FLU EPIDEMIC

The flu epidemic took 7,000,000 lives in British India during 1918, according to the census takers.

The figure is big, but it gets only a few lines in the cable news. In our country, it would be equivalent to killing one person in 15.

Human life is very cheap in the Orient, at times of less financial value than a handful of rice. That is one reason why the Oriental is a fatalist.

NORTH DAKOTA'S SENATORIAL FIGHT

Is North Dakota going to send another Non-partisan leagueur to the United States senate?

Reports from there indicate that it is not improbable if the bitterness between the various republican factions continues to grow.

The race for the senatorial nomination is approaching a scramble. Senator Porter J. McCumber apparently has the support of many of the old-line regulars. Former Governor Frazier has staged a come-back and has been endorsed by the Nonpartisan league and Former Senator A. J. Gronna seems mostly to be approved by himself.

Against this trio of experienced politicians the republican leaders of the Independent Voters' association, who seem to hate McCumber as much as they do Frazier, have set a flinty face and are combing the state in the hope of finding some yet unknown Moses strong enough to lead them to the land of political milk and honey. This means at least four candidates and, as it is more than two months to the primaries, there may be others.

But regardless of how many there be the logic of the situation seems to mean that the real fight will be between McCumber and the Nonpartisan Frazier. McCumber has, perhaps needlessly, antagonized some influential members of his party at home, but his long record in the senate is creditable and he is enough of a practical politician to make the most of it. With only Frazier as an opponent he would doubtless win, but with voters who would naturally go to him being confused by the other factions in the party the Nonpartisans may easily feel encouraged. Of course there is talk of the Nonpartisan vote being dissipated, but hope is the father of much talk. Frazier has demonstrated several times that he is a powerful vote-getter and he may do it again.

North Dakota republicans may want another Nonpartisan senator as a companion for Ladd but if they don't their methods are mystifying to an outsider.—Duluth Herald.

IT'S THE OPEN SEASON FOR PLESIOSAURI

BEGIN HERE TODAY

A series of significant differences over trivial events has convinced MARK SABRE, a well-educated Englishman, that after eight years of married life that he is almost completely estranged from his prosaic and snobbish wife.

MABEL He seeks refuge in the company of his eccentric neighbors, Mr. Pargus and "The Perks."

YOUNG PERCH and his invalid mother. Suddenly an old friend returns to his life. The friend is NONA, an old sweetheart, now the wife of the dashing LORD TYBAR.

Sabre's inability to find sympathy at home is duplicated in the office. At Fortune, East and Sabre where he has charge of the publishing department. He dreams of writing a history of England and has been promised full partnership in the firm. Suddenly his hopes are blasted when TWYNING, a jealous colleague, announces that he has been promoted to the partnership by Fortune, chief shareholder.

GO ON WITH THE STORY

Sabre uttered a single word, "Good!" Twyning's face darkened again and darkened worse. He spoke also in a single word, "Thanks!" He turned sharply on his heel and went to the door.

"I say, Twyning!" Sabre jumped to his feet and went to Twyning with outstretched hand. "I didn't mean to take it like that. Don't think I'm a splinter. I congratulate you. Jolly good! Splendid! I tell you what—I don't mind telling you—it was a bit of a smack in the eye for me for a moment. You know, I've rather sweated over this business"—his glance indicated the stacked bookshelves, the firm's publications, his publication—

"See what I mean?" A certain movement in his throat and about his mouth indicated, more than his words, what he meant. A slight.

Twyning took the hand and gripped it with a firmness characteristic of his handshake.

"Thanks, old man. Thanks awfully. Of course I know what you mean."

Outside the door he clenched his hands. He thought, "Smack in the eye for you was it? You'll get a damn sight worse smack in the eye one of these days. Dirt, dog!"

Immediately the door was closed. Sabre went what he would have called "plug in" to Mr. Fortune; that is to say, without hesitation and without reflection.

"I've just heard that you've told Twyning you're going to take him into partnership."

The whale-like front gave a sudden leap and quiver precisely as if it had been struck by a cricket ball. Mr. Fortune's voice hardened very remarkably. "As to that, I will permit myself two remarks. In the first place I consider it highly reprehensible of Twyning to have communicated this to you."

"Sabre broke in. "Well, he didn't infer it. It seems I inferred correctly."

There flashed through Mr. Fortune's mind a poignant regret that, this being the case he had not denied it. He said, "I am exceedingly glad to hear Sabre, despite his private feelings in the matter characteristically followed this reasoning completely, and said so. Yes, that's your way of looking at it, sir, and I don't say it isn't perfectly sound—from your point of view."

Mr. Fortune inclined his head solemnly. "I am obliged to you."

"Only other people look at things on the face of them, just as they appear. You know—it's difficult to express it—I've put my heart into those books. I can't quite explain it but I felt that the slight, or what looks like a slight, is on them, not on me." He put his hand to the back of his head, a habit characteristic when he was embarrassed or perplexed. "I'm afraid I can't quite express it, but it's the books."

"No, I confess that is a little beyond me," said Mr. Fortune, smoothing his front and they remained looking at one another.

A sudden and unearthly moan sounded through the room. Mr. Fortune spun himself with relief to his desk and applied his lips to a flexible speaking tube.

Sabre roused himself and stood up abruptly. "Ah, well! All right, sir."

Arrived again in his room, Sabre dropped into his chair. In his eyes was the look that had been in them when he had tried to explain to Mr. Fortune about the books, what Mr. Fortune had confessed he found a little beyond him. He thought: "The books. . . Of course Fortune hasn't imagined them. . . seen them grow. . . But it hurts. Like hell it hurts. . . And I can't explain to him how I feel about them. . . I can't explain to any one."

He knitted his brows: "It goes deeper than that. It's some universal thing that's wanting. Is it something that religion ought to give, but doesn't? Light? Some new light to give every one certainty in religion, in belief. Light?"

His thoughts went to Mabel. Upon a sudden impulse he looked at his watch. Only just after twelve. He could get back in time for lunch. Lonely for her, day after day, and less as he had left her that morning. They could have a jolly afternoon together. He could make it a jolly afternoon. Nona kept coming into his thoughts—and more so after this Twyning business. He would have Mabel in his thoughts.

He went in and told Mr. Fortune he rather thought of taking the afternoon off if he was not wanted. He mounted his bicycle and rode purposefully back to Mabel.

CHAPTER III
I
"Anything for me, Prrrip?" Sabre asked the postman as he arrived at Pennv Greens.

"One, Mr. Sabre." Sabre took the letter and glanced at the handwriting.

It was from Nona. Her small, neat, masculine script had once been as familiar to him as his own. It was curiously like his own. She had the same trick of not linking all the letters in a word. He glanced at it, regarded it for slightly longer than a glance, and with a little pucker of brows and lips, then made the action of putting it, unopened, in his pocket. Then he rested the bicycle against his hip and opened her letter.

"Northrepps. Tuesday." She never dated her letters. He used to be always telling her about that. Tuesday was yesterday.

Dear Marko—we're back. We've been from China to Peru—almost. Come up one day and be bored about it. How are you? Nona.

He thought: "Funny she didn't mention she'd written just now. Perhaps she thought it was funny I didn't say I'd had it. I must tell her."

Mabel was descending the stairs as he entered the hall. In the white dress she wore she made a pleasant picture against the broad, shallow stairway and the dark paneling. But she did not appear particularly pleased to see him. But he thought, "Why should she be? That's just it. That's why I've come back."

"Hullo!" she greeted him. "Have you forgotten something?"

He smiled invitingly. "No, I've just come back. I suddenly thought we'd have a holiday."

She showed puzzlement. "A holiday? What, the office? All of you?"

She had paused three steps from the foot of the stairs, her right hand on the banisters.

His wife. . . He slid his hand up the rail and rested it on hers. "Good Lord, no. Not the office. No, I suddenly thought we'd have a holiday. You and I."

He half hoped she would respond to the touch of his hand by turning the palm of her own to it. But he thought, "Why should she?" and she did not. She said, "But how extraordinary! Whatever for?"

She had descended and he moved along the hall with her towards the morning room.

"It's rather extraordinary," she said.

She certainly was not enthusiastic over it. She asked, "Well, what are you going to do?"

He wished he had thought of some plan as he came along. "What time's lunch?" Come on, we'll cut the flowers."

II
She cut the first rose and held it to her lips, smelling it. "Lovely. Who was your letter from, Mark?"

He thought, "How on earth did she know?" He had forgotten it himself. "How ever did you know? From Lady Tybar. They're back."

"I saw you from the window with the postman. Lady Tybar! Whatever was she writing to you about?"

He somehow did not like this. Why, "whatever"? And being watched was rather beastly; he remembered he had fiddled about with the letter—half put it in his pocket and then taken it out again. And why not? What did it matter? Mabel did not particularly like Nona. He said, "Just to say they're back. She wants us to go up there."

Learn a Word Every Day

Today's word is EXHUME. It's pronounced—eks-hewm, with accent on the last syllable. It means—to dig up, to remove a body from place of burial, to dis-inter. It comes from Latin "ex," out of, and "humus," ground. Companion word—exhumation. It's used like this—"When murder is suspected, it is customary to exhume the body of the person supposed to have been slain."

Seed Bed for Wheat

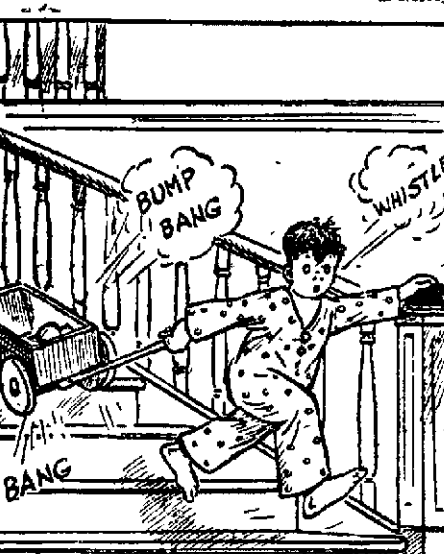

Wheat must have a shallow, loose seed bed and a firmly packed root bed. The illustration shows the clods and the air spaces left after plowing. This soil must be firmed down.

Put in your Marquis wheat just as soon as your seed bed is ready. Marquis is an early variety ripening four to ten days earlier than most of the other varieties, which is often enough to enable it to escape rust.

THRESHING FROM THE STACK BETTER THAN FROM SHOCK

Good Farm Practice to Stack Because in a Wet Season Quality of Wheat is Protected.

Wheat generally is threshed from the shock to avoid the labor and expense of stacking. Proper stacking of wheat is good practice, however, and will pay. It is better protection from the weather and the quality of the grain is usually improved by the curing process taking place in the stack. Nearly every farmer will testify that the quality of the wheat is improved enough to pay for stacking.

One of the main difficulties nowadays is to secure competent stackers. The ground selected for the stack should be well drained. High ground is generally the best but not essential. The stacks should be located where most convenient for threshing or feeding or upon thin or poor spots in the field.

It is good practice to build a platform of old rails, boards, etc., in order to keep the bottom courses of the ground. Begin in the middle and set up the bundles just the same as if you were making a shock. Stand the first bundles with the butts down and as they are added to round and round, they will begin to lie more nearly flat. Lay them like shingles so that all water may be shed to the outside. Add to your circle until the stack bottom is about ten feet across. Larger than this will be too big after the bulge is put on. After a few layers, start the bulge gradually. The bulge will probably make the stack about 16 feet across which is wide enough for ordinary pitching.

While the bulge is being built and until the stacker begins to draw in, the middle of the stack may be kept on a level with the outer bundles or even below their level. The outer bundles should be laid without tramping but the next row inside the outer row, should be laid tightly and tramped as the bundles are laid.

After the stack has reached the height of ten or 12 feet, it should be drawn in with each round of bundles. Keep the center higher from now on. The bundles should be laid with the butt end out and down. The pitch of these bundles will depend a good deal upon the condition of the grain. Grain that is very dry is hard to stack as it slips badly, but ordinarily there is no such trouble. Build the center higher and higher so it will top out nicely. At no time should the butts of the bundles be turned in, as this will cause a low place where the heads lie and will give a chance for spoiling.

Making a rain-proof top that will not blow off, is the fine art. Sharpen a pole, push it well down into the top of the stack and anchor the top. Some stackers use as many as four of these poles. Others anchor the stack by hanging weights by a wire over the top.

Unless a very smooth job of stacking has been done, poles or logs should be used for weights rather than stones as the stones might sink into the sides of the stack and have little anchorage. It is best to stack all in the same place so that the thrasher will not have to be moved.

The round stack affords a greater storage space for the amount of surface exposed and is easier to get out in threshing.

It must be remembered that it takes no more labor to bring the shocks to the stack than it would to bring them from the field to the thrasher, although, of course, there is another handling. The thrashing crew, however, and the number of teams employed will be greatly reduced.

The pitcher from the load is an important factor as he can make it either easy or hard for the stacker. A good work hand can place his bundles accurately at the side of the stacker and in the position desired by him. The stacker usually goes around from left to right and the pitcher should place the bundles between the stacker and the center of the stack, generally with the butts forward and where the least effort will be made to place the bundle in place. Good pitching will speed up the work and a good pitcher and his side partner, the stacker, can build almost two stacks to the clumsy hand's one.

MARQUIS WHEAT

Wheat raising will always be popular because it is less work than any other crop.

Marquis wheat is the best spring wheat. It yields better than any other wheat. If sown early, it stands a good show of escaping rust. In a rust free year it will make a better profit than any other crop.

OUR WHEAT SOIL NEEDS PHOSPHATES

A Profitable Crop Depends Upon Good Seed, a Fertile Soil and Clean Farming.

Nearly all of the spring wheat land has been cropped to one or another of the small grains almost continuously since it was first broken up. The result is that it is poor in humus and plantfood and the soil is in poor physical condition, some of it so poor that a good crop can no longer be obtained.

The very best way to correct this condition is to grow wheat in rotation with other crops, especially legumes or grass crops. All the manure available should be added to the soil.

Experiments conducted in Kansas show that on land where wheat had been grown continually for ten years, that the yield was but 6.9 per acre, but that when 2 1/2 tons of manure was added annually, the yield was 18.4.

When a legume was added in a three-year rotation with corn, the 2 1/2 tons of manure per acre used, the yield was increased to 25.6. In the same series of experiments conducted for 16 years on fields where broom grass, corn and wheat were alternated with five tons of manure, every third year, the yield was increased to 37.2.

The rotation to be recommended for your farm should have a cultivated crop and a legume for every two grain crops, as a general thing. But this is not always possible, so you will have to work out the best rotation for your case according to conditions.

Every farmer ought to try at least a little acid phosphate to convince himself whether or not it will be profitable. If the soil is deficient in phosphates, the time will come when this fertility will have to be restored, and it is much better to begin before the fertility is exhausted.

WHEAT PRODUCTION

The Influence of Soil Management in the Red River Valley by H. L. Walster, Agronomist, N. Dak. Agr. Exp. Station.

Wheat production declines under continuous cropping. The competition of weeds (principally wild oats and French weed) and the inroads of black stem rust have been the major limiting factors in wheat production on the Fargo clay during the past eight years. The extent to which this soil or any other soil may be expected to respond to any fertilizer or amendment cannot be measured when weeds or plant disease prevent maximum yields. Disease-resistant varieties of wheat should be substituted for disease-susceptible varieties in fertilizer trials that are aimed to discover chemical deficiencies in the soil. The use of farm manure in a continuous grain culture system does not raise production, largely because of the serious competition of weeds. Rotation culture alone has raised wheat yields on the Fargo clay 3 1/2 bushels per acre during the past 8 years; the use of from 9 to 12 tons of fresh stable manure applied once in four years has returned a further increase of 2 1/2 bushels; and supplementary treatment with either acid phosphate or steamed bone meal once in four years has added still another bushel. To summarize: Wheat under rotation culture, the soil treated with manure and phosphate fertilizer, has yielded over 40 per cent more than unmanured wheat land under continuous culture. Rotation alone has raised the yield over 20 per cent; and manure has returned an average annual increase of 12 per cent over that of rotation alone.

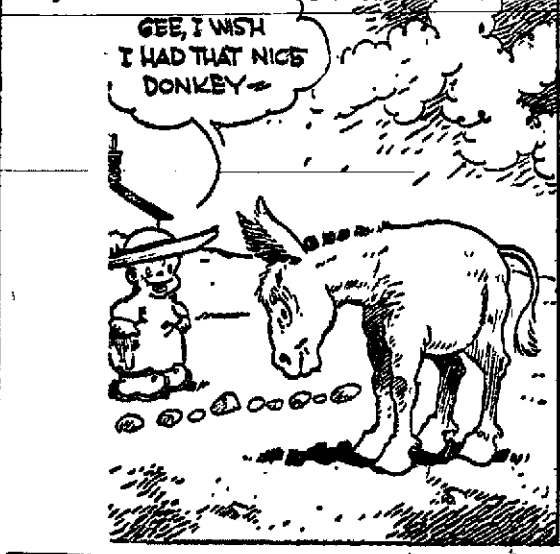

In a four-year rotation of potatoes, wheat, clover and barley with crop residues (barley straw, wheat straw, and second crop of clover) returned to the soil, the addition of phosphorus increased the yield 7.96 per cent as an eight-year average. In a four-year rotation of corn, wheat, clover and oats, with manure returned (1 pound of fresh manure returned for every pound of produce removed) supplementary treatment with the same amount of phosphates increased the yield only 4.01 per cent as an eight year average.

As an average of four rust-free years phosphate increased the yield of wheat 3.07 bushels to the acre or 11.3 per cent where crop residues were returned. As an average of the same four years phosphorus increased the yield of wheat 1.02 bushels or 3.2 per cent where manure was returned. The actual yields of wheat have always averaged higher under the manure system than under the crop residue system.

LEGAL NOTICES

Notice is hereby given that by reason of default therein, that certain mortgage made and executed by John Walter and Verne W. Walter, to the Bismarck Mortgage Company, which said mortgage is dated October 14, 1917, and filed for record in the office of the Register of Deeds of Burleigh county, state of North Dakota, on the 17th day of October, 1917, in Book 118, of Mortgages, page 36, at 7:40 P. M. will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in said mortgage at the said office of the Register of Deeds of Burleigh county, state of North Dakota, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon of the 15th day of April, 1922, to satisfy the amount due on said mortgage on the date of sale. The premises described in said mortgage and which will be sold to satisfy the same are as follows: (to-wit) The East Half (E 1/2) of the Northeast Quarter (NE 1/4) and the North Half (NH 1/2) of the Southeast Quarter (SE 1/4) of Section Twenty-eight (28) Township One Hundred Forty-one (141) Range Seventy-seven (77).

Said mortgage contains a clause authorizing the mortgagee to declare the whole sum due if there is a default, and the whole of said mortgage is hereby declared due. There will be due on said mortgage on the date of sale the sum of $175.00.

Notice of intention to foreclose was given, as required by law, more than thirty days before the beginning of the proceedings. The default consists of the non payment of the sums of $21.00 principal and $156.00 interest.

Dated this 3rd day of March, 1922.

HENRIET MORTGAGE COMPANY.

Supreme Court of Kansas To Pass On Skirt Length

Lawrence, Kan., April 7.—How short a girl's skirt must be to be a disturber of scholastic peace, and when, if ever, it becomes the concern of a school board, are questions expected to be laid before the supreme court of Kansas, following the recent action of District Judge Hugh Means in sustaining a demurrer of the Vinland, Kansas, rural school board against his jurisdiction in an action brought on behalf of Alice Hansen and Maude Buchanan, Vinland high school pupils against the board.

Alice and Maude are 15 years old, and both are farmers' daughters. Court action was brought by J. E. Hansen, father of Alice, when the Vinland school board, after adopting a rule requiring pupils to wear skirts three inches below the knees, decided that the skirts of Alice and Maude did not meet specifications, and ex-

MARKETS

MODERATE UPURNS.

Chicago, April 7.—Moderate upturns early in wheat prices here resulted today from comparative firmness of quotations at Liverpool. Another factor which tended to make offerings light was uncertainty over the government crop report, due this afternoon. The opening which varied from unchanged to 3-8 cents higher, was followed by an advance all around to well above yesterday's finish.

Further offerings of wheat shipments from Omaha to Chicago eased the market somewhat. Prices closed unsettled, 1-4 to 3-4 cents not higher.

CHICAGO LIVESTOCK

Chicago, April 7.—Cattle receipts 4,500. Slow generally steady. Hog receipts, 22,000. Active, steady to 10 cents higher. Sheep receipts 5,500. Generally steady.

VALUATION REDUCED

Marmarth, N. D., April 7.—As the result of complaints of excessive valuation presented by the taxpayers committee of Marmarth, the state tax commissioner has advised that he has ordered a 30 per cent reduction in the 1921 valuation of all town and city lots in Marmarth as left by the state board of equalization last fall. He states that this in reality is a reduction based on a valuation of 145 per cent. The ruling will mean, it is stated, that the books in the county auditor's and treasurer's offices will have to be revised and when this is done the valuation will stand for 1922 also.

A loaf of BREAD!

A perfect loaf of Bread, almost two thousand years old!

Excavation in the interests of scientific research has unearthed such a loaf, preserved by the lava of Vesuvius, in the buried ruins of the city of Pompeii. Your strongest human link with this former civilization is that small familiar loaf of Bread, their most nourishing and necessary food then, just as it is yours today.

Bread is the basis of the diet for civilization. Have you ever thought that you can measure the advancement of any nation by the kind of Bread they demand?

BLUE RIBBON and HUMPTY DUMPTY BREAD

meet every requirement of the American standard today. Made from purest selected ingredients—mixed and baked under the watchful supervision of skilled bakers in a clean, airy bakery, with the aid of the most scientific machinery. Their delicious flavor sums up the entire progress of Bread in the two thousand years from Pompeii to the present day.
